

TOWN OF EASTHAM

HISTORIC PROPERTIES SURVEY PROJECT

FINAL REPORT

August 15, 2005

Project Overview

The goal of the project was to record and provide an evaluative context for mid-20th-century resort houses in Eastham. The Town of Eastham is a small municipality located between Orleans and Wellfleet at the southern part of the upper arm of Cape Cod. The Cape Cod National Seashore occupies the ocean side of the town and represents approximately one-third of its land mass. Like many Cape Cod towns, Eastham is densely developed with small summer cottages, cabin colonies, and retirement homes, most of which were constructed in the last seventy-five years on tiny lots and narrow dirt lanes on abandoned farms and in the scrub forest on the bay side of the peninsula.

This period of radical development and transformation has only recently been viewed as historic, but the small-scale, modest architecture it has produced is still considered by many property owners as disposable. Nearly all of the available land has been built out. New construction projects in recent years have usually required the demolition of existing houses. By the account of the town planner, ten to twelve applications for demolition permits are received each month. The town has recently enacted a demolition delay ordinance as a safety net for old buildings; however, a more explicit preservation strategy is needed. This survey provides an overview of the history of 20th-century residential development in Eastham and documents approximately 250 vulnerable resources. In the process a rough typology of 20th-century resort architecture has been identified.

Two large areas were selected because they contained the majority of properties on the town's survey wish-list. One area is concentrated around Camp Ground Road, which contains properties ranging from the early 19th-century agricultural period of the town to the Post-WWII-era resort period. For a portion of this time, as the name of the road implies, this area was the location of a Methodist Campground. The other area has Kingsbury Beach Road as an axis. This area contains a particularly dense and diverse concentration of houses. Both areas include large subdivisions of summer cottages built near Cape Cod Bay.

Within these areas, component properties were classified by type, design, period and other factors to create a catalog of house forms and styles that characterize the 20th-century development in Eastham. Four additional properties outside the two areas were selected for the property type they represent (e.g. ocean-side houses, hunting camps, camp colonies), their uniqueness, or those considered threatened.

Products

1. The final products of this survey include a narrative historical overview of residential development in the Town of Eastham during the 20th century as the landscape evolved from one supporting traditional agricultural and coastal industries to one based in a growing resort economy. It addresses the following.
 - How the traditional 19th-century landscape, which was involved in agriculture, saltmaking, and fishing, experienced its economic decline and was replaced by a resort industry based on the scenic and recreational appeal of the ocean and bay and facilitated by transportation improvements for automobile access.
 - The resulting transformation of the natural and built environment documented by a narrative chronology of notable events.
 - The economic, social, political, and cultural effects of expanding resort development including accounts of local landowners, buyers and sellers, local and non-local developers and builders, tourism entrepreneurs (cottage court operators), second home buyers, vacationers, and retirees.
 - The development of the tourism economy and the marketing of Eastham and Cape Cod in the context of other developments in New England and the greater Northeast.
 - The character and variety of architecture oriented to tourism, including but not limited to, hunting camps, cabin colonies for overnight or short-term residents, single vernacular cottages, “high end” Oceanside homes, re-used farm houses and farmsteads later subdivided.

2. Detailed MHC area forms have been completed for two areas with narrative description and historical sections addressing the particular characteristics that distinguish each area as well as those that associate them with the broader development history of the town. Each includes annotated and illustrated building lists describing component properties using classifications leading to an architectural typology. These areas are named
 - Campground Road Area
 - Kingsbury Beach Road Area

3. Detailed MHC area and building forms have been completed for four notable properties outside the two areas using the same contextual analysis, architectural classifications, illustrations, and assessments of significance. These properties are
 - Moulton’s Cottages, 50-80 Hay Road
 - Smith Heights Cottages, 1440 State Highway
 - Great Pond Camp, 55 Clark’s Point Road
 - Doane – Duncan House, 705 Doane Road

National Register Criteria Forms have been completed for the first three properties on this list.

4. A base map indicating the location of surveyed areas and properties in the town as well as individual maps for each component have been digitally created using the town's GIS.
5. A bibliography has been assembled from sources used in researching the historical overview and individual property histories. It is attached at the end of this report.

Recommendations for Further Study

- Reconnaissance-level survey and assessment of 20th-century residential architecture on a town-wide basis with particular attention to early subdivisions and planned developments.
- Inventory of 20th-century commercial properties including cabin colonies and motels
- Collect documentation on 20th-century development from land records, local newspapers, town archives, and oral histories.
- Coordinate study with other towns to develop a more regional study and promote public awareness of distinctive qualities of 20th-century cultural landscape.
- Proceed with national/state and local designations for significant 20th-century areas.

PROPERTIES IDENTIFIED AS ELIGIBLE FOR THE NATIONAL REGISTER OF HISTORIC PLACES

See National Register Criteria Statement Forms attached to Relevant Properties

INDIVIDUAL PROPERTIES

MHC No.	Name	Street Address	Criteria
214 – 215	Great Pond Camp	55 Clark's Point Road	A, B & C

This hunting lodge on Great Pond is a distinctive example of the earliest resort architecture in the Town of Eastham. With portions built c. 1895, it is a rare surviving example of this type and a significant representation of resort history in this period. The first outsiders to utilize the natural environment of Eastham for recreation were hunters who visited briefly in the spring and fall as wild fowl migrated across the Cape. Great Pond was a perennial stopping place, and in the late 19th century groups of affluent hunters would congregate there, set up blinds, and await the ducks' arrival. In this case, a group of enthusiasts from Boston, many well-known in their professions, pooled their resources and built a pond-side hunting lodge to afford better comforts as well as quick access to their prey. The building and its decorated common room remains intact, although it has been enlarged, winterized and adapted to a year-round residence. [Other hunting lodges exist on Great Pond, and a thematic group might be considered.]

Area L

217 – 233	Moulton's Cottages	50 – 80 Hay Road	A & B
-----------	--------------------	------------------	-------

This grouping of 15 cabins and what was the Dutch Colonial Revival residence of the owner/operator of the colony is an intact and distinctive example of an automobile-age road-side cabin colonies that were popular on the Cape in the 1930s, when this particular example evolved to its present extent. Few of these resources survive physically intact, much less to the degree of architectural authenticity as this one. Protected by covenants when they became condominiums in the 1980s, the cabins retain their original, small-scale plans, exterior wood shingle and wood clapboard finishes, and arrangement in two semi-circular tiers emanating from the central feature of the owners' house, which faces the state highway. The story of their construction and operation by the Moulton family is well documented and contributes valuable information about the influx of tourists in the period between the World Wars as well as the entrepreneurs to accommodate them.

MHC No.	Name	Street Address	Criteria
Area M 234 – 237	Smith Heights Cottages	1440 State Highway	A & B

The three cottages remaining on Smith Heights represent what appears to have been the first commercial cottage development in the Town of Eastham. Part of a seven cottage colony constructed by native Easthamer Francis W. Smith in 1910-1911, the three cottages are essentially intact to their original appearances and reflect the introduction of more mainstream Craftsman-style cottage design into the Cape Cod vernacular. All three buildings have broad, flattened hipped roofs and front facades on the narrow ends of rectangular plans popularized by catalog models of affordable village and suburban dwellings that were also known as cottages. Broad front porches wrapping around the sides with solid kneewalls and screening for protection from flying insects are a distinctive beach cottage feature. Originally interior plans were informal and non-existent finishes were part of the seaside appeal; however, summer cottages now have generally been winterized and made more habitable.

LARGE AREAS

The two large areas surveyed do not appear to be eligible in total, although there are individual properties and smaller portions in each that have potential. Even though National Register eligibility is limited, these are both important historic beach roads that deserve some measure of local protection. The areas have been intensively surveyed in their entirety to enable the town to address the historically significant aspects of resort architecture and planning in the period between 1910 and 1960.

Some historic features are prominent in the definition of the areas. The least visible of them is the subdivision history and how it explains the existing pattern of dense, small scale development, especially in beach areas. Detailed contexts have been developed for the areas that articulate this history and associate it to locations along the main roads. These subdivisions extend back from the main roads and an attempt has been made to classify these properties in relation to historic periods and themes. Their physical conditions are generally defined by a wooded setting (which has become more prominent over the years), unimproved, narrow dirt roads (which are better characterized as vehicle paths), small building lots and buildings that are small in plan and low in height, and a rustic architecture reflecting the seasonal recreational use. The houses were economical in their cost and finishes and, like most affordable housing of the period, were enlarged and adapted in gradual and casual ways by their owners. To discourage tear-downs, lot consolidation, and the construction of larger and more pretentious dwellings guidelines could be developed based on the historic design characteristics of the areas. There are a few examples of context-sensitive new construction – particularly in the Kingsbury Beach Road area – that provide good models of effective design and/or design review.

This is a notable and historic road in the town appearing in the early 19th century to connect a Methodist campground on Herring Brook Road with a ferry landing on the bay. Nothing remains from that era except for a farmhouse located near the campground, which is clearly an eligible property. The rest of the historic resources have construction dates that range from c. 1910 when vacation cottages began to appear and c. 1965 or the end of the historic period. There are a number of intact representative examples of cottage architecture along the Campground Road that appear to be eligible within that local theme (see list below), yet it is difficult to visualize a historic district because of the amount of non-historic in-fill. However, there is historic district potential at the western shoreline where three subdivisions were registered between 1912 and 1915. Houses have been built here from 1912 to the present, but with only a few exceptions, the scale, design, and pattern of this cottage development is distinctive and significant in the town.

AREA O Kingsbury Beach Road Area Kingsbury Beach Road, etc. A & B

The same general conditions exist on Kingsbury Beach Road as described above for Campground Beach Road. There are scattered individual properties along the road that appear to meet the National Register criteria as distinctive examples of local domestic architecture in the period and two districts: one comprising a bay-side subdivision and the other containing distinctive dwellings ranging from the early 19th century to the early 20th century at the northern end of Great Pond. Kingsbury Beach Road was not extended to the bay shore until the early 20th century, and houses of a later date (1950s and 1960s) characterize more of the road. One large subdivision platted in 1947 dominates the area between Herring Brook and Weir roads. It was too large and diverse to itemize as part of this area survey except for lots along Kingsbury Beach Road.
