

How long does it take to get a permit from the Conservation Commission?

Usually about a month after the application is received, if the project is straightforward and the application materials are detailed and the project is clearly described. In some cases, it could be as short as two weeks.